Entertainment Extra by Evelyn

Q. I was wondering now that a movie has been made about a "Green Acres" reunion that perhaps the show will return as a weekly series in the four Seasons. And could you please give me a rundown on the career of Eddie Albert? I ask because some of the students here at my university have something of a cult following of the "Green Acres" reruns now airing on the Nick-Jelodeon cable channel. Gail S.

A. While Eddie really enjoyed making "Return To Green Acres," he has mixed off the report of doing another weekly series. In fact, Eddie rarely watches television at all. However, he did not rule out doing an occasional "Green Acres" made-for-TV movie.

Although his extraordinary versatility makes it difficult to sum up Eddie Albert, one need but list the many hats he wears during a typical 12-month year. Indeed, actor, comedian, singer, researcher, discoverer, writer, athlete, animal lover, gardener, citizen of the world and environmentalist pop out[illegible]

Born Edward Albert Heimberger in Rock Island, Illinois, Eddie was a year old when the family moved to Minneapolis. He studied at the University of Minnesota through his junior year when, growing restless, he decided to pursue his ambitions to become an entertainer. He began as a magician in the movie houses he was managing, performing tricks before and after each film. He soon started working with a singing trio, who met with immediate radio success, playing stations throughout the Midwest.

The glamour of New York City naturally beckoned and, after several years of struggling, Eddie Albert and Grace Brush formed a singing duet and went to NBC, which put them on the air as "The Honeymooners — Grace and Eddie." One of their guests, playwright Garson Kanin, was so impressed with Eddie's range and stubbornness that he cast him in the Broadway production of "Brother Rat," a role which quickly established Eddie as a star of the theater. Whether Brown Shoes cast him in the film adaptation of the play and Eddie is unknown, but he did receive rave reviews.

After a stint in the Navy during World War II, Eddie resumed his acting career. In the ensuing years, he has garnered a truly impressive list of accolades, including two Academy Award nominations, for 1954's "Roman Holiday" and 1973's "The Heartbreak Kid." In addition, his longstanding interest in, and contributions to, humanitarian causes have brought an equally impressive roster of awards, among them The Humanitarian Award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews and the Brotherhood Award from the B'nai B'rith.

Q. Please settle a bet. I say Sharon Stone and Kevin Dobson made a movie together but my friend vehemently denies it. Who's to the know here? Terri A.

A. They, in fact, starred in a movie together titled "Blindfold and Legs," written by Ruth Gordon and Garson Kanin.

Q. In the recent NBC mini series "People Like Us," I heard that Hedges Taylor's character of society columnist Dolly is actually Dominick Dunne's interpretation of Liz Smith's Post columnist Suzy in this correct? Page G.

A. Sassy and smiling the character is the self proclaimed Queen of Gossip and Social Doings. Suzy.

Q. I'm so sure the new movie, "Phantom of the Opera," stars Tyrrl Pulo, the girl who was so good in the recent NBC version that I'd bet anything on it. But a friend says Polo can't even sing. What's the story? Thanks. Lily G.

A. I'm glad you didn't bet the farm, or anything on your certainty. Lily. The star of the upcoming film of the Andrew Lloyd Webber theater production of "Phantom" is Sarah Brightman, the woman who created the role of Christine in the London original and reprised it on the Broadway New York production. Terri Polo can sing, but she didn't do it on the TV version, she lip-synched to someone else's perfectly pitched warbling.

For your further information, "Phantom of the Opera" will star Michael Crawford as the "Phantom, the role he played in London, New York and Los Angeles. Warner Bros will produce the flick.

Q. When I was a kid, I used to watch the old Arthur Godfrey show. I loved the McGuire Sisters and Julius LaRosa. Are they still active today? Gina P

A. They certainly are. LaRosa does a lot of dinner theater. The McGuires, with time out to raise families, are back on the concert and cabaret tour.

Q. Is Julie Roberts the daughter of Julie Newmar? Todd N.

Q. Was Julie Newmar the only Catwoman on the old Adam West "Batman" series? I seem to remember someone else played the role as well. Vicky O.

A. No, Ms Roberts is not the daughter of Ms Newmar.

And, no, Ms Newmar was not the only one to play the fascinating felina. Lee Merriweather and Eartha Kitt also played the purring purloiner.

Q What is Retro jewelry? I keep seeing that term in the ads.

A. Retro is jewelry from the 1940s. Precious stone pieces made in this period featured large rectangular stones surrounded by smaller stones of several colors. Diamonds, rubies, emeralds or aquamarines might be in one large pin. During this same period, the "invisible set" was also popular. The technique, such irony, was introduced in 1940. Each stone was cut with grooves on the sides and held in an invisible setting of platinum wires. The finished ring or pin had dozens of small rubies or sapphires set to look like one large stone with crisscross lines of the edges barely showing.

Q. My brightly colored tin winding toy car is marked on the bottom with a small figure holding a "B" in the center of his tummy. Is the word "Bandai" Does this date the toy?

A. The Bandai Baby is a mark used by a Japanese toy company from 1963 to 1980.

Q. My bookends, made of brass colored iron, picture and name the Lincoln Imp. What did this imp do?

A. The Lincoln imp is carved on the Lincoln Cathedral in England. According to the legend, the curfew imp stopped to look around while the cathedral was being built. He was turned into a stone decoration. Hundreds of different tourist items have been made perpetuating the Imp. bookends were probably made in the 1940s.

TIP. It is best to wash marble with distilled water. Any trace of acid or iron in the water will cause deterioration or stains. Use soft soap, a bit of ammonia and a plastic container.

LINKING HEADACHES AND DIET! If you have frequent headaches, consult your doctor to see if eye problems or some other condition is causing these painful episodes. If no medical problem is involved, your diet may be the culprit. Researchers found 75 percent of headache sufferers exhibit a chemical reaction to certain substances in foods (vasoactive substances) that cause blood vessels in the head to expand and rub against sensitive nerves, triggering an attack. According to the National Headache Foundation, these vasoactive substances can be found in foods and beverages, such as:

1 Milk Products. Aged and processed cheese (Swiss, Edam, Cheddar Brie, blue etc.), yogurt, sour cream, chocolate milk and buttermilk — Recommended substitutes, soft cheeses such as cottage, ricotta, or cream cheese, skim or two percent fat free milk; imitation sour cream.

2. Meats and Fish processed (hot dogs, bacon, ham, salami) and aged and tenderized meats, or marinated fish (pickled herring). These products contain sodium nitrite, a triggering agent. — Substitute fresh meats and fish, and avoid the use of salt.

3 Fruits and Vegetables: avocados, onions, raisins, nuts, seeds, lima beans, figs and plums can trigger headaches. Check with your doctor on how to adjust your diet so you don't lose the essential nutrients in these foods.

4 Breads and Baked Goods Yeast and yeast extracts in freshly made breads, coffee cake, doughnuts and sourdough breads produce a vasoactive substance when they rise. — Substitute commercially baked goods

5 Beverages — non alcoholic Coffee, tea, and soft drinks (including chocolate) contain the vasoactive substance, caffeine. — Substitute decaffeinated beverages

6. Beverages — alcoholic Tyramine, a triggering agent, is found in beer red wines, and sherry — Substitute white wine

DEAR DEX

DEAR DEX,

My 77-year-old grandfather is getting a little senile, but he's still capable of taking care of himself. He can still cook, bathe, and take care of some of the chores around his house. My father and his two brothers want to put him in a nursing home. My grandfather said if they think it's best, they'll go, but he really would like to stay home until the day he dies. I love my grandfather and want him to stay in his own home. I told my father that they should hire a nurse or live-in maid to take care of things there; he certainly has enough money to do that. They said it would be better for him in a nursing home. The real reason, though, is they want to sell the house and divide the money among themselves. I overheard them talking about it, that the nursing home would be cheaper than maintaining the home and leaving a nurse, but my grandfather has plenty of money to do all those things, and still will have plenty to leave them someday. They're just looking out for themselves. I would like to know what I can do to keep Grandpa, without causing a war in the family. My grandfather and I would appreciate any advice you have.

UPSET

DEAR UPSET

If your father and his brothers want to sell your grandfather's house while he's still able enough to live in a nursing home, they have to have him legally declared incompetent to handle his own affairs. Should they try to do so, your grandfather will be contacted immediately, anyway. However, before it gets to that point, I believe you should inform your grandfather what's going on. Even though it will cause some problems, your grandfather has every right to know what's going on so that he can continue to make his own decisions about his life. While you may come under some fire from your father, look him in the eye and ask him if he'd like you to someday treat him the same way he's treating his father right now. I'm sure the answer will be no.
